. Note:Hey, y'all. I'm back in NZ for a little while and thought I'd finally get this off my mind. I've been thinking about it a lot ever since I posted my last blog and about two weeks ago I had a real blow up and then things kinda went downhill. So I just wanted to say that I've got nothing else to say now except "sorry". We are here to feel because we're in a place with feelings and there isn't an end in sight. That's why I'm so happy that you keep reading. There is someone out there who is reading what you're saying, sharing these stories, remembering what we were together, and letting me know that you're ready to move on too. Somehow, everything I did started to have a bearing on what kind of family I wanted to be a part of. I remember watching my parents trying to conceive for an entire year, and even though they were having the right sex and did everything completely wrong, I still arrived at adulthood with a terrible case of resentment. A month after that, I was studying to be a teacher and getting pregnant with our first child conceived what felt like out of the blue. I remember putting my head down on the table and wishing that if I was going to have the child, it would happen while I was sleeping. It was the only way I could keep my sanity. As I grew older, I began to imagine different kinds of families. One night I had the idea
