Examined self-reported pain intensity in children after herniated disc surgery: follow-up from 5-year to 10-year. A commonly used self-report instrument for the assessment of patient-reported pain is the VAS (Visual Analogue Scale), which is widely used in both children and adults. This study aimed to assess the validity of the VAS in children undergoing discectomy for disc herniation in terms of both reliability and validity over time. Retrospective review of patients undergoing discectomy for disc herniation with the VAS used to determine pre- and postoperative pain levels. A total of 104 children were included in the study, with 92% of the cohort completing the 10-year follow-up. Inter-rater reliability was excellent at five years postoperatively ($r = 0.89$) and good to excellent at 10 years ($r = 0.77-0.94$). There was a highly significant reduction in the pain reported by
