The Tool Palette With an image open in Photoshop, the far-right side of the screen is the Tool Palette, which holds a collection of tools for creating and altering effects (see Figure 4-1). To open the Tool Palette, choose Edit > Customize Toolbar. You can then drag tools or buttons from the Toolbar drop-down menu at the top of the Tool Palette and place them in the order you want. FIGURE 4-1: The Tool Palette holds most of Photoshop's tools. The following list describes the tools available in the Tool Palette: * Pencil, Eraser, Smudge Stick: Each of these tools can be used to draw lines, fill a block of color or erase parts of a photo. * Brush, Blur Tool, Paint Bucket: These tools are used to create textures, change the look of flat areas, add a blur effect, and do other artwork. * Clone Stamp: This tool is used to duplicate objects in a photo or to create mask objects so you can remove an object from another object. * Gradient Tool:

TUCSON, Ariz. — Tempe has declared a public health emergency over the so-called “polar vortex” that is moving through the Valley. The city of around 240,000 residents confirmed a case of the virus on Friday. This is the first case confirmed in Arizona. Tucson also has declared a health emergency. This is a developing story. Check back later for updates. The city of Tempe and Chandler confirmed cases of the virus on Friday. Both cities have declared a public health emergency over the virus.Q: What are the differences between UML and BPMN? What are the differences between UML and BPMN? Are UML modeling languages a subset of BPMN? A: UML model is an object model to describe data and logic in a business environment. So it mainly is an enterprise modelling language. More details at Wikipedia: UML is a modelling language that describes the business world in terms of its objects, activities, and communication. This body of knowledge is called the Unified Modelling Language. BPMN is a modelling language for Business Process Management (BPM). More info at Wikipedia: A business process model describes a sequence of tasks performed by organizations or individuals to solve a business problem. BPMN diagrams are used to illustrate the process flow, process modeling and process specification. A: The UML and BPMN modeling languages are quite different. You can use BPMN to describe workflows or business processes as a design artifact. It is a software model like any other. You can use UML for modeling business processes and information systems. In the UML world you have a number of different standards and dialects that attempt to map different aspects of business processes to the standard UML elements. You can achieve a lot with UML. In particular, you can model business processes in UML. If you are able to draw a UML model, you can input the model into BPMN or a workflow engine like Rocksof’s BPMN Designer. A: I think you will find this question answered here. What is the difference between BPMN and UML? Q: Custom post type do not publish. I am trying to create a custom post type called ‘events’, with a custom taxonomy called Q: Trying to hide a button in jquery after I click a specified link I’m creating a project that I want to hide the button when I click the specific link and when I click any other link than the specified one I want to show the button again. My button: Button My.js code: $(document).ready(function() { $('btn-success').hide(); $('a[href="/assigned"]').click(function() { $('btn-success').show(); }); $('a[href="/invited"]').click(function() { $('btn-success').hide(); }); }); The code is working only with the first.js code, the second one hides the button completely. Here is the full code. A: There are multiple issues with your code: (1) You want the button to appear again after you click any link but you’re not binding any events for it to show again. (2) You want to always show the button instead of hiding it, while still checking the href attribute. (3) I can’t see your HTML since you only show it as a screenshot, but your HTML should be: Button Instead of: Button An alternate solution would be to use a click handler for the button and add/remove a class that will remove the other button as well. $(document).ready(function() { $('btn-success').hide(); $('btn-success').click(function(e) { $('btn-success').removeClass("btn-success"); $(this).toggleClass("btn-success"); }); });
