The current paper is focused on some selected stories from the book Burhi Air Sadhu (Assamese: Grandmothers Tales). The paper highlights with the help of some empirical examples the contribution of folklore towards social and cultural formation and creative imagination. The folktales are inseparable from religious practice, in that they are deeply entrenched in rituals and ceremonies. The paper focuses on the influence of the cultural and religious beliefs in developing and maintaining the folklore of Assamese people. The paper takes an effort to focus on some selected stories for generating some further analytical insights and informing the analytical method of the paper. The Assam Institute of Folklore and Tribal Culture has compiled the text of Burhi Air Sadhu. In the introduction to this book the Director General of the Institute, Sankar Singha stated the following: The writer of the present paper has critically read the Assamese version of the book 'Burhi Air Sadhu' and a chapter has been drafted. Some of the facts about the author, editor, translators, contributors and forewords have been added in the present paper. [7] The writer of this paper has been working on this book since two years and three months (to 22.06.2006). Here this is the longest process and in the end it is published. This compilation of folklore has been made as a part of Assam Institute of Folklore and Tribal Culture's social service programs. Cultural purification and conservation is the aim of Assam Institute of Folklore and Tribal Culture. 'Burhi Air Sadhu' is a significant part of cultural conservation of Assamese folktales. This compilation was made in the course of research and collection of Assamese folklore. The compilation of the 'Burhi Air Sadhu' is a continuation of the 'Assamese Folklore' Compilation started in 1966 under the aegis of the Department of Anthropology and Folklore of the University of Assam. The 'Assamese Folklore' Compilation is a part of an interdisciplinary research on Assamese cultural identity and has been published by the Assam Institute of Folklore and Tribal Culture. There have been three publications of this book. The first one (1966) was published from the University of Assam under the Department of Anthropology and Folklore. The second one (2003) was published from the University of Assam under the Department of Anthropology and Folklore, as a part of an interdisciplinary research on Assamese cultural identity and a few of the selected stories were published in this book. The third compilation and publication of the book 'Burhi Air Sadhu' has been done by Assam Institute of Folklore and Tribal Culture (IS.PR.16.78) and the first publication has been made in the year 1991.
