With the transfer of governmental functions to the states after independence, the centre lost the important.[A nursing experience of the respiratory treatment in Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease (COPD)]. This work has as a main objective describe the nursing practice in COPD patients admitted to the Respiratory Department at the Juiz de Fora teaching hospital, Minas Gerais. This is a descriptive study developed with a qualitative approach, with four elderly women doctors as interviewers and ten COPD patients. The results showed that the most important issue in the nursing care involves promoting activities that normalize the daily life of the patient and his family, and the promotion of self-care, as, for example, take care of medication, hygiene and cleaning. The nurses have become more responsible in the treatment of patients with COPD and they have shown themselves as committed with their work. The results of this study bring out the need for the implementation of nursing interventions in different spheres of COPD patients' life, especially in the family and at home.Q: Where do I find an online javascript e-book?
