The blast was recorded in the nearby Chelyabinsk city and resulted in at least 13,000 pieces of shrapnel as the massive space rock plunged through the atmosphere, officials said. The U.S. Geological Survey said the meteor was 56 feet wide. Advertisement: The Obama administration, while it was not involved in any way in the alleged Russian hacking during the 2016 presidential election, condemned Russian meddling in that election in unequivocal terms Tuesday. "The United States condemns Russia's actions," the White House said in a statement. "There is no question that Russia interfered with the 2016 election in order to promote Donald Trump and reject Hillary Clinton. This is not a secret. No reasonable person can dispute this fact." The statement was released in response to news that 12 Russian military intelligence officers will face charges and that two other Americans will be charged in connection with the hacking. Advertisement: "They were the KGB," U.S. prosecutor Preet Bharara said on "Good Morning America" on Tuesday. "They are evil. We need to confront evil. And so when a foreign country, that is an adversary, that
